Support Response Times and Case Updates

Support Procedures

Fictional training documentation for a local RAG demonstration.

General approach

Give customers realistic updates based on the support policy and the current ticket state. A response target is not the same as a guaranteed resolution time.

No invented SLA

This fictional knowledge base does not specify contractual response-time numbers. If a customer asks for an exact SLA or resolution deadline, check the customer's agreement or approved support policy rather than inventing a number.

Acknowledgement

Acknowledge the issue, summarize the impact, and explain the next action. If investigation is ongoing, say what is being checked and when the next update is expected only when that update time is known.

Waiting on customer

Ask for the specific missing information needed to proceed. Avoid closing a case without following the team's documented waiting and closure process.

Escalated cases

Tell the customer that the case has been referred to the relevant team when that is true. Do not expose internal-only notes, private employee details, or speculative root causes.

Example

“We are investigating the upload error using the details you provided. We will update you when we have a verified finding. I cannot confirm a resolution time yet.”
